

20. A dice game of claim 2, further comprising, wherein a game is played, wherein rules are followed and scores maintained, scoring also pertaining to possible collecting or paying off wagers placed on the out come of a hand or game, using a plurality of dice forming two nulls indicated by the word "Toss" with said six suits of dice divided into fourteen (14) six-sided cubes which are divided equally among six suits, constituting three pairs of suits, each of said suit pair being enveloped by a single color of one of the three fundamental colors of the dice, each pair of suits being linked by fundamental color, to a joker of the same fundamental color, with one Boss Joker, empowered by all three of the fundamental colors, wherein said plurality of dice have a hierarchical sequence with the Boss Joker above all in the succession of the sets of dice, with all indicia, values and "suit" markings distributed in random order across the 84 flat surfaces of said cubes, linked by play, to other six-sided cubes wherein the set of dice, or portions thereof, are used for playing, trick taking, melding or scoring in a standard or deluxe format with the use of jokers and nulls being optional.

ABSTRACT

A deck of cards/dice, real or simulated, characterized by a Boss Joker, colored jokers, card suits and null cards. These suits are of any three, four or more fundamental colors, two suits of each color per joker under a designated Boss Joker with an optional methodology to capture cards from opponents. Depending on the game, null cards can have very dramatic influence. The preferred form of this present invention is a deck of playing cards and related family of card games. Peg boards may be used to tally scores. Card backs are uniform. This deck has the "look and feel" of a traditional deck with more challenging and exciting options. For example, during the play, players may demand an opponent "Toss" (forfeit) a trick, then that opponent may "DoubleCross" and repossess the original cards plus additional cards. These decks and family of games are known as Toss & DoubleCross™.